Wikibooks is a useful resource if you're curious about a subject, but you couldn't reference it in academic work. It's also worth noting that although Wikibooks' editors are sharp-eyed, some less scrupulous contributors may plagiarize copyright-protected work by other authors. Some recipes, for example, appear to be paraphrased from well-known chefs.

Both of the first two rifles on this list are variants of a gun first manufactured over half a century ago, the Heckler and Koch G3, one of the most revered battle rifles ever produced. What would go on to become the H&K G3 was first produced in 1958. Primarily designed by German engineers working for the Spanish CETME development group, the CETME-C was a Roller-Delayed 7.62×51 rifle. Century ...

about angels leaving their first estate, or if those words are used in Enoch 1. I will have to get back on that at a later time after reading some commentaries, and references material, as this is out of my debth depth of knowledge. At this time I do not see any proof of angels and women producing babies in Jude. Or in Gen 6. But as I read up ...

This article explores how bisexuality is represented in emerging adults' discourses about sexuality. More specifically, the authors highlight four mechanisms through which their participants invisibilize bisexuality: (1) ignoring bisexuality, (2) depicting bisexuality as temporary, (3) making it almost impossible to be a 'real' bisexual, and (4) devaluing bisexuality.
