Improving communication is one of the most important – and challenging – issues that management accountants face. In this publication you will learn: How do management accountants know if they are effectively communicating? What are the most effective techniques for improving their communication skills? This book is specifically designed to meet the needs and interests of management accountants. It draws on interviews with finance professionals at every level of corporate accounting, as well as with communication consultants, executive recruiters and educators. It looks at how management accountants communicate inside and outside their organizations, identifies best practices, and gives hands-on strategies that accountants can use right away. Readers will discover how to: Move their current communication skills to a higher level. Recognize the importance of communication within the context of their financial manager function. Understand the right way to deliver bad news and resolve conflicts. Manage the impact of new technologies on traditional communication channels. Internal communication is a growing field with the number of specialists increasing worldwide. In spite of this, and vast increases in spending on communication, research shows that organizations are finding it difficult to raise the number of employees who feel well informed. Now, more than ever, internal communication does not just concern communication managers. In today's lean organizations line managers are taking on more and more of the burden of employee communication and managers of remote offices have to be their own communication managers. 'Talking Business: making communication work' addresses the key issues in communication within organizations, supported by case studies taken from experience of working with global businesses. It provides a coherent theory of business communication and shows how a radical difference to communication practice and business performance can be made. The authors employ an interactive structure throughout with signposts to link related cases and chapters.
